✕ The Islands Of Murano, Burano And Torcello

Interests: sailing, culture, architecture

If you want to add some color to your Venice itinerary, an island-hopping adventure is just the right thing for you. After boarding the private cruiser, you will first get the chance to explore Murano. World-renowned for its glass blowing art, Murano is made up of seven islands which are in turn connected by bridges and like Venice has its own Grand Canal. Your next stop will be the picturesque island of Burano that very much represents Venice as it once was. Famed for its buranello handmade lace, this island will give you plenty of photo opportunities with its colorful fishermen's houses. The last stop of the day will be Torcello, the first human settlement in the lagoon established around the 5th century. The major monuments in Torcello include the quaint Byzantine church of Santa Fosca with its beautiful portico and the bigger Basilica of Santa Maria Assunta with its famous mosaic that inspired Dante Alighieri's Divine Comedy.

✕ The Burano and San Francesco del Deserto Islands

Interests: sailing, culture, architecture

The San Francesco del Deserto island is located in the middle of the lagoon between Burano and Sant'Erasmus. Since 1227 it has housed a friary founded by San Francesco d'Assisi on his way back from the Holy Land. It is here that the "Miracle of the birds" took place. The tour starts from the little church and small cloister and finishes with a stroll in the beautiful garden where you can see Burano, a little island renowned for pillow laces and colored fishermen's cottages. Burano is a tranquil haven and a complete opposite of the often-crowded Venice. Wander the vibrant streets, interact with the locals, watch the fishermen repair their traditional nets by the water, try some of the local dishes in a typical Buranella trattoria or observe the lovely elderly ladies as they embroider the delicate buranello lace.

✕ Venice Viewed by the Water

Interests: sailing, culture, architecture

There is no greater way to explore and see the real Venice than by cruising through its canals. Sail leisurely along the Grand Canal and get a glimpse of all that Venice has to offer. Discover the charm and silence of the narrow waterways, observe the silhouettes of ancient rooftops against limpid skies. This journey will let you explore vibrant neighborhoods, bridges and squares, you will even get a glimpse of secret gardens while provides detailed information on all the sites and architectural marvels you pass during your tour.

✕ Wineries of the Lagoon

Interests: wine, culture

The one thing you would hardly imagine is to find wineries in the middle of the Venice lagoon but the fact is, a few islands within the lagoon are still cultivating some rare grape varieties and producing wine. Your enology adventure starts from Venice and your first will be the island of Sant'Erasmus, known as the vegetable garden of Venice and famous for its purple artichokes. You will then continue on to the small and picturesque Mazzorbo, another island connected by a wooden bridge to the more famous Burano. In Mazzorbo lies an ancient walled vegetable garden as well as the native vineyards of Venice. On this unique island, in fact, the ancient Venetian vines cultivated during the Serenissima Republic, have been wisely replanted and only recently rediscovered. The wine has a slightly salty taste as grapes absorb some salt from the ground making it very tasty and different from Sant' Erasmus's white wine. Besides the wine tasting, lunch with local food can be arranged upon request.
